Paris
Art Studies ‐ March-April 2012

Fridays: The History of Paris

with Chris Boïcos and Dimitri Papalexis for fashion.

Architecture, Urbanism,
Society - Part 11:

Paris of the “années folles”
(1918-1929)

On 11 November 1918 the First World War officially ended. Paris immediately decided to forget the depressing war years by launching itself into the future in a whirlpool of energy and frivolity. Café life and Bohemia had already moved to the Left Bank before the war, but the ‘20’s will witness the opening of the first “dancings américains” like the Coupole, and cocktail bars catering to the growing number of Anglo-American writers (Hemingway, the Fitzgeralds, Joyce), journalists and hard drinking tourists escaping Prohibition at home.

Josephine Baker inaugurates
the jazz age and the icon of Paris Bohemia, the 1920's girl or "garçonne", is Man Ray's girlfriend, the famous Kiki de Montparnasse. Art Deco is the great architectural and decorative style of this period, challenged by the more modernist, purist style of Le Corbusier and Mallet-Stevens. In the arts the anarchic Dada group, followed by André

Breton's Surrealists, with their obsession with sex and Freud are the most radical movements of the day. Poiret, Chanel, Vionnet and Lanvin are the key fashion designers for the new women who drive, drink and smoke

proclaiming openly their new-found freedom.

Berenice Abbott at the Jeu de

Paume (21 Feb. to 29 April)

Thursday 8 March, 12 to 1:30 pm.

Berenice Abbott (1898-1991) is one of the best known American photographers of the early 20th century. She arrived in Paris in the 1920's becoming the assistant of Man Ray for whom she did numerous portraits of the literary and artistic luminaries of the day: Eugène Atget, Marcel Duchamp, James Joyce, Cocteau, Sylvia Beach, Gide, Foujita, Max Ernst, Marie Laurencin and more. The current exhibition presents 120 photos from the Paris years, from her famous series of the 1930's, "Changing New York", commissioned by the WPA, her photos of Route 1 and her experimental work for MIT of the post war years. Abbott was also instrumental in discovering the forgotten work of the great 19c Paris photographer Eugène Atget whose archives she salvaged and sold to MoMA. A unique opportunity to see the full career of one of the iconic figures of American and modern photography.

Jews in Orientalist Art at the Musée d'art et d'histoire du Judaïsme (7 March to 8 July).

Thursday 15 March, 12 noon to 1:30 pm.

The discovery of North Africa by the painters of the Romantic generation like Delacroix and Theodore Chassériau led to the birth of "Orientalism" in 19th century art. Along with the Muslim societies of the Maghreb and later the Middle East, European artists also discovered the old Jewish communities in Arab and Turkish lands, whose colourful clothing and customs became part of a new image of the Jew as an exotic oriental figure, very different from the assimilated Western European Jews or the Hassidic Jews of the Russian Empire.

This is the first major exhibition that explores the representation of the Jews in Orientalist and Biblical painting from the early Romantic period to the time of the settling of Palestine by the Zionists in the early 20th century. This unique exhibition brings together works by a great number of painters of all nations: Delacroix, Chassériau, Dehodencq, Cordier, Lévy-Dhurmer, Seddon, Gérôme, Gustave Moreau, Cabanel, Vernet, Alma-Tadema, Holman Hunt, Tissot, Lesser Ury, Zeev Raban, Reuven Rubin, Nahum Gutman...

Place: Lobby of Musée d'art et d'histoire du judaïsme, 71 Rue du Temple 75003.

Métro:
Hôtel de Ville (lines 1, 11)

Time: 11:40 for 12 noon start (security in this museum is cumbersome so please arrive on time).

Please bring 9.50 € for exhibition ticket.*

Akseli
Gallen-Kallela (1865-1931) – A Finnish passion at the Musée d'Orsay (7 Feb. to 6 May)

Thursday 22 March, 10 to 11:30 am.

First retrospective exhibition in France of one of the most famous Finnish artists of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Gallen-Kallela studied in Paris in the 1880's where he became famous for his murals for the Finnish pavilion of the 1900 World's fair. In 1908 he explored equatorial Africa bringing back a flamboyant collection of paintings and watercolors. His art is also a reflection of Finnish nationalism and the building of a Finnish national identity out of language, folklore and local mythology at the opening of the 20th century. Gallen Kallela fought the Russians in the war of independence of 1917 and later decorated the new national museum in Helsinki. His art covers most styles of his period from Realism, through Symbolism, Art Nouveau and Expressionism. A unique opportunity to discover a little known Scandinavian genius.

Place: Group entrance B – Musée d’Orsay 75007.

Métro: RER Musée d’Orsay (line C) or Solférino (line 12).

The New Impressionist Galleries at the Musée d’Orsay

Thursday 29 March 9:30 to 11 am.

Though the Musée d’Orsay has probably the finest collection of 19th century art in the world, the original museum from the 1980’s displayed it in stony, harshly lit galleries that diminished the impact of many of the finest works. The rebuilding of the Impressionist galleries by the new and controversial director of the museum, Guy de Cogeval, has completely transformed the museum with bold colors, the latest technology in museum lighting, and a considerable re-hanging of the collections juxtaposing salon and academic artists of the 19th century to the better know modern masters. Dozens of new works have been brought out from the reserves to be displayed in the greatly expanded new spaces. In our visit we will be taking in many of the celebrated masterpieces by Monet, Manet, Degas, Gauguin, and Van Gogh in their new galleries and examine also the major new rooms and displays. Our early visit will enable us to see the collections at leisure before the massive arrival of visitors later in the morning.

Place: Group entrance B – Musée d’Orsay 75007.
Métro: RER Musée d’Orsay (line C) or Solférino (line 12).

Time: 9:45 for 10 am start.
Please bring 9 € for museum ticket.*

same subject in an often more concentrated and purified form. Many of his most celebrated works from great international museum collections, the Seville still life (St Petersburg), The Black Fern (Beyeler collection) Interior with Egyptian Curtain (Phillips Collection, Washington) The Romanian Blouse (Paris) Luxe II
(Copenhagen) Goldfish with palette

Degas and the Nude at the Musée d'Orsay (13 March – 1 July) Tuesday 10 April, 12:30 to 2 pm.

This is the first major exhibition in Paris devoted to Edgar Degas (1834-1917) since the 1988 retrospective at the Grand Palais. The exhibition explores Degas' evolution in his practice of the nude, from the academic and historical approach of his early years to the increasingly radical and modern manner of his later years. All techniques from painting, sculpture, drawing, prints and above all pastel are present in major works from prestigious museum collections (Boston MFA, Art Institute of Chicago, the Metropolitan Museum of Art) including the Musée d'Orsay's own very fragile and seldom exhibited works on paper by the great Impressionist artist.

Place: Group entrance B – Musée d'Orsay 75007.

Métro: RER Musée d'Orsay (line C) or Solférino (line 12).
