Fridays: Kings, Queens and Royal Mistresses of Renaissance Paris:
1515-1589

with Chris Boïcos and Dimitri Papalexis for costume history.

The civilization of the Italian Renaissance was first introduced to the French royal court by the great Valois king François I (1494-1547). His two most famous architectural creations were the Louvre palace in Paris and the royal hunting château of Fontainebleau that gave its name to the new art and architecture of the era. He married twice: Claude de France (who gave her name to the French green plum) and Eleanor of Austria. His most famous mistresses were Françoise de Foix and Anne de Pisseleu duchess of Etampes for whom he built a splendid bedroom in Fontainebleau. His son and the second great Renaissance King of France, was Henri II (1547-1559) who married Catherine de Medici (1519-1589) from Florence. His mistress was the highly cultivated Diane de Poitiers who used the classical goddess Diana as her personal symbol. After Henri's sudden death in a jousting tournament, Catherine oversaw the successive and unlucky reigns of her three sons François II, Charles IX and Henri III. The 15-year old François II was married to Mary Stuart the future queen of Scotland. He reigned for a mere 5 months dying of a mastoiditis. His brother Charles IX married Elisabeth of Austria and took as his mistress the beautiful commoner Marie Touchet. He presided over the infamous St Bartholomew night massacre of Protestants in Paris in 1572 dying shortly after in a state of madness and delirium. Henri III, his brother, who had in the meanwhile been given the kingdom of Poland rushed back to France to assume the crown. He was married to Louise of Lorraine and was falsely rumored to be a homosexual. He was killed by a fanatic monk in 1589. None of Catherine's sons had legitimate male children so the crown passed on to their cousin the Protestant duke of Bourbon Henri IV ushering in a new era of French history (see next course below). We will study the lives and doings of all the main characters of this rich and turbulent period, using the fashion, art, decoration and architecture of the French Renaissance as our main background.

Paris Special

exhibitions with Chris Boïcos and Dimitri Papalexis:

Thursday 13 Sep. 10:30 am – 12 noon. Gerhard Richter – Panorama

Gallery

slide lecture on the exhibition at the Centre Pompidou (until 24 Sep.)

Gerhard

Richter (born in 1932) is considered the greatest living German painter. He studied art in Dresden in the immediate post-war years and emigrated to West Germany in the 1960's where he first became famous for his blurred, evocative paintings after black and white photographs of German urban scenes and landscapes. The current retrospective of 150 works first shown at the Tate gallery in London, covers all periods of Richter's career including his luscious abstract paintings of the 1970's and 1980's. In the 1990's he returned to the photographic realism of his early career but concentrating this time on images alluding to contemporary German history, the Second World War and the terrorist group of Baader-Meinhof of the 1970's. A unique opportunity to witness the entire career of one of most lauded art stars of the moment.

Place:
Galerie Beckel Odille Boïcos -
1, rue Jacques Cœur 75004 Paris.

Métro:
Bastille (lines 1,5,8) exit boulevard Henri IV

Time: 10 am for coffee and tea. 10:30 am for lecture.

Thursday 20 Sep. 4 – 5:30 pm. Canaletto –
Guardi, the two masters of Venice.

At the
Musée Jacquemart André (14 Sep. – 14 Jan. 2013).

A rare exhibition focusing on the evolution of the “vedute” (views) of Venice in the 18th century by the greatest masters of the genre,
Canaletto and Guardi and their most talented followers, van Wittel, Clavarijs, Marieschi and Belotto. 25 major Canalettos in the artist’s precise and luminous topographical style and many fine “capriccios” (imaginary views) by Guardi have been lent by major museum collections: the British royal collections, Thyssen-Bornemisza in Madrid, the Frick collection in New York and the museums of Parma and Budapest.

Place: Entrance of museum 158 blvd
Hausmann 75008.

Métro: Miromesnil
(lines 9,13)

Time: 3:45 for 4pm entrance. Bring 11€ for ticket.

Thursday 27 Sep. 4:30 – 6 pm. The Modern Art
Circle – Avant gardes in Le Havre.

At the
Musée du Luxembourg (19 Sep. – 6 Jan. 2013). Monet, Pissarro, Dufy, Marquet, Braque, Bonnard and more…

A highly original exhibition honoring an enlightened group of merchant collectors from France’s wealthiest northern port city in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Olivier Senn, Charles-Auguste Marande, Georges Dussueil and Pieter van de Velde are the chief figures to become interested in modern art in Le Havre at the time of its greatest prosperity. In 1906 they created an influential collectors’ club dubbed the “Cercle de l’art moderne”. Many of their original purchases, now dispersed across the world, have been brought back together for the first time. Among the major artists represented are Bonnard, Braque, Corot, Delacroix, Dufy, Marquet, Monet, Pissarro and Valotton, many of whom are also from Le Havre.

Place:
Meet at entrance of museum, 19 rue de Vaugirard 75006.

Métro: St
Sulpice or Odéon (lines 4,10).

Time: 4:10 for 4:30 pm start. Please bring 11€ for museum ticket.

Tuesday 2 Oct. 11:30 am – 1:00pm. Van Cleef and Arpels – The Art of High Jewelry.

At the
Musée des arts décoratifs (20 Sep. – 10 Feb. 2013).

With
couturier and costume historian Dimitri Papalexis.

First
major exhibition of the historic creations of the celebrated jewelers of the place Vendôme. Founded by Alfred Van Cleef and the brothers Charles and Julien Arpels in 1906 the jewelry house quickly conquered the clientele of the wealthy and fashionable. In the 1920’s it created some of the most original art deco and exotic jewels often inspired by Egyptian, Chinese, Japanese and Persian designs and was also famous for its "white" jewelry combining platinum and diamonds. Branches soon opened in Deauville, Nice, Cannes, Vichy... In the 1930's the house became famous for the invisible mounting of precious stones and in the post war years its pieces were worn by the most famous women of the day from Maria Callas to Grace Kelly and Elizabeth Taylor. 150 original pieces with a quantity of drawings and archival documents illustrate the history and sophisticated techniques of this fabled house.

Place:

Lobby of museum, 107 rue de Rivoli 75001.

Métro:

Palais-Royal-Musée du Louvre (lines 1, 7).

Time:

Meet at 11 :15 in the lobby for an 11 :30 start. Visit limited to 20 people. Please bring 9,50€ for ticket.

Thursday 11 Oct. 10:15 – 11:45 am. Impressionism and Fashion.

At the

Musée d'Orsay (25 Sep. – 20 Jan. 2013). With Chris Boïcos.

This

major exhibition co-produced by the Musée d'Orsay, the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and the Art Institute of Chicago, concentrates on the depiction of fashion and costume in Impressionist painting between 1860 and 1880. With the expansion of the industrial revolution, the birth of the department store, the modern illustrated press and fashion plates, the mid 19th century experienced a democratization and vast expansion of fashion and accessories which was reflected in the painting of the period. Writers such as Baudelaire, Mallarmé and Zola placed costume at the forefront of the depiction of "modernity" and had a lasting impact on the painting of their artist friends: Manet, Monet, Degas, Bazille, Caillebotte and Morisot. The exhibition juxtaposes famous masterpieces such as Monet's "Luncheon on the grass" or Degas' "At the milliner's" to original dresses, accessories, photographs and prints of the era. This will undoubtedly be the most popular exhibition of the rentrée.

Place: Group

entrance B – Musée d'Orsay 75007.

Métro:

RER Musée d'Orsay (line C) or Solférino (line 12).

Time: Meet at 10:00 am for a 10:15 start. Please bring 12€ for museum ticket.

Thursday 18 Oct. 10:30 am – 12 noon. Edward Hopper slide lecture on the exhibition at the Grand Palais (10 Oct. – 28 Jan. 2013).

Gallery

First

retrospective exhibition

in France of the work of the one of the greatest 20th century American painters, Edward Hopper (1882-1967). A large selection of paintings, watercolors, prints and drawings illustrate all aspects of his career from his early years in Robert Henri's studio and in Paris to his New York and New England works of the late years.

Hopper created some of the most iconic images of early 20th century urban America in his views of shop fronts, bars, cinemas, offices or lonely apartment tenants in New York City.

These are complimented by his luminous visions of the New England seaside, sailboats and Victorian porches, which offer an escape from the sometimes oppressive vision of the modern city. This major show has been put together in collaboration with the Thyssen

Bornemisza collection in Madrid and the Pompidou Centre in Paris.

Place:

Galerie Beckel Odille Boïcos -

1, rue Jacques Cœur 75004 Paris.

Métro:

Bastille (lines 1,5,8) exit boulevard Henri IV

Time: 10 am for coffee and tea. 10:30 am for lecture.

Thursday 25 Oct. 10:15 – 11:45 am. Impressionism and Fashion

At the

Musée d’Orsay (25 Sep. – 20 Jan. 2013). With couturier and costume historian Dimitri Papalexis.

This major exhibition co-produced by the Musée d’Orsay, the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and the Art Institute of Chicago, concentrates on the depiction of fashion and costume in Impressionist painting between 1860 and 1880.
